Any member can submit an automated digital slide presentation on a thumb/flash drive or DVD that can operate on a Windows computer. Make a 3-minute video of your interpretation of the alphabet, with or without music. Submit it at the Dec. Meeting.

From the Editor

We will miss you Fred.

We lost one of our long time LPS members, friends and photographers. Fred Engelmann. Fred died November 25th. He is survived by his wife, Catherine, of 63 years, three sons, four grandchildren and five sisters.

We at LPS knew Fred as a very accomplished and enthusiastic photographer. He was not only an LPS member but a board member for several years.

I personally remember seeing Fred just last month at the November LPS meeting. I will always remember his engaging smile and open personality. He had told me, a while back about how he used to run motels in the Southwest many years ago. His wife mentioned that he used to run a New York Deli before that as well. As a result he loved both the New York Yankees and the Southwest.

No doubt Fred loved photography too.

I think many accomplished photographers create a certain photographic style. We will always remember Fred's style with his "sandwiched slides". Think about it, it's got to be pretty difficult and time consuming to review a ton of your 35 mm slides, find one image and then combine it with another image that you may have taken ten years previous. He not only did this once, but consistently throughout the years to win many awards. Fred did this without any assistance of software like Photoshop. He was not only an LPS award winner, but a member of Louisville's other club, the Photo Forum. He participated and won many awards with the Photographic Society of America (PSA). He had his images published in Petersen's Photographic Magazine as well as other national publications.

Fred was one of several legendary LPS members that were masters of film, composition, manual exposure, and manual focus, yet really struggled with the world's transition to digital. He recently told me he acquired a DSLR. He hadn't really used it, since it was so different from his film SLR. Thanks to friends like Gertrude Hudson, who converted some of his film images to digital so he could compete in the digital competitions.

While LPS members may choose to remember Fred's sandwiched images when they think of him, I also choose to remember his winning image entitled "Cat". There are a billion cat images on the web everyday, but this photo is different to me. It is a simple composition of two big eyes, a nose and partial whiskers. You can't teach someone to turn the camera a certain way to get such an image. This kitten was undoubtedly shot on film, without a hint of increased digital saturation, sharpening, or anything else. A simple image showing Fred's sensitivity and talent.

Fred, I will remember your smile, warm personality and stories of your travels. As photographers though we will always remember your wonderful and creative images too. They let us see life "through your eyes" throughout the years.

For that we will always be grateful.

Your LPS editor.

A Note About Fred....

Fred Englemann came to LPS first time in September 1996 and joined and entered Slide competition. I was doing good, was high in points and he wiped me out. He won most everything for several years.

We were friendly competitors. The last year we had slides I won over him, (it was fun-). When we went to digital he didn't have any way of entering and I told him I would scan his slides and send them in for him and I have done that every month including this month and he still beats me every year.

I will miss him.

Gertrude Hudson

Reminder: Got any secret shooting spots?

LPS has some of the region's best photographers. I have noticed that some of the best photographers in the world, have a tendency to "give back" by sharing their expertise and favorite locations with other photographers.

LPS can be a wonderful opportunity for you to share these local locations with fellow members.

If you would like to lead a group of LPS members to your favorite location or event, please email your editor, Ken Tripp at KDTripp@mac.com to coordinate the event.

Depending on the location, we can have members sign up ahead of time and let you be the leader to share your wealth of knowledge about the location.

If we all help each other in LPS, who knows what powerful images await!
